

Electronic health records (EHRs) are an essential part of modern healthcare, improving patient care and enhancing the efficiency of healthcare organizations. Implementing a new EHR can be challenging, but Patagonia Health stands out from its competitors in the EHR industry with its hassle-free implementation process.

Seamless Data Migration

Some companies that provide electronic health record (EHR) services may ask you to do most of the work yourself, leaving you with no assistance during data transfers and a system that may not be suitable for your needs. This can waste time and have a negative effect on your practice. We work closely with you throughout the entire process to make sure that your transition to our EHR system goes smoothly and that you are able to successfully incorporate our system into your practice.

Remote and On-Site Training

We understand that making the switch to a new EHR can be challenging for your staff. That's why we offer training both on-site and remotely. This ensures that your team is ready when it comes time to switch and that they are comfortable using the new system. After you go-live, we continue to support your team with monthly webinars, additional training hours, and plenty of resources to make sure you get the most out of our system.

I just wanted to tell you how wonderful it's been having your implementation team here to train our staff. They have all been amazing, and we have and are, learning so much from them. They've been thorough, patient and professional with our staff. I know this will set us up well for going live in little less than a month now, which we're very excited about. Thanks for a great experience to date – we love it!
